A Tofu Labs needlepoint chart

Designed and drawn stitch by stitch by Tofu Labs. Merry stitching!

Hello, stitcher!

Puff is a round little snowman in a green bobble hat and a candy-red scarf, on soft sage with snowy dots. He's our free mini ornament: 53 stitches across, about 3 inches on 18 mesh, so you can finish him in a few cozy evenings and still have time to stitch one for a friend.

What's inside

- Thread list with DMC numbers, stitch counts and skeins for 18 and 13 mesh
- The whole design on one chart page, with a symbol in every colored square (background squares have no symbol: you stitch them in the background color)
- Canvas guides at actual size for 18 mesh and 13 mesh, to paint or trace your own canvas
- How to work tent stitch, and how to finish it as a hanging ornament

Sizes and supplies

Canvas mesh	Finished size	Cut your canvas	Floss strands	Skeins in all
18 mesh (designed for)	2.9 x 2.9 in (7.5 x 7.5 cm)	7 x 7 in	8 strands	9 skeins
13 mesh	4.1 x 4.1 in (10.4 x 10.4 cm)	9 x 9 in	12 strands	11 skeins

You'll need: a 7 x 7 in piece of 18 mesh canvas (or 9 x 9 in of 13 mesh for a bigger ornament), a size 22 tapestry needle (20 for 13 mesh), DMC floss from the thread list, plus felt, card and cording for finishing.

Squares with no symbol are the background: DMC 989 Forest Green. Gray squares are bare canvas: no stitch there.

Prefer wool or Perle cotton? Any needlepoint shop can match these DMC numbers. On 13 mesh most stitchers use 12 strands of floss, 2 plies of Persian wool, or Perle #3; on 18 mesh 8 strands of floss, 1 ply of Persian wool, or Perle #5.

The whole design

53 x 53 stitches. The chart on the next page shows the same design, square by square, with a symbol for each color.

How to stitch it

Continental (rows)

Come up at 1, go down at 2, come up at 3 one hole to the left. Work right to left, turn your canvas around for the next row. Best for outlines, faces, letters and single lines.

Basketweave (diagonals)

The same little stitch, worked in diagonal rows from the top right corner: down row 1, back up row 2, down row 3, and so on. It hardly pulls the canvas out of shape and covers the back well, so use it for big areas like the background.

Getting your design onto the canvas

Option 1, stitch from the chart. Mark the center of your canvas, find the center arrows on the chart and count out from there. Most stitchers start with the outlines and faces, then fill the background.

Option 2, paint your canvas first. Print the canvas guide at actual size, tape your canvas over it on a bright window or light box, and paint each colored area with acrylic or canvas paint (let it dry fully). Then stitch the colors you painted and keep the chart next to you for small details.

Thread length. Cut about 18 in at a time; longer threads fray and twist. Start with a waste knot on top a few inches away, and end by weaving under 5 or 6 stitches on the back.

Tension. Pull just snug so the thread covers the canvas without pinching it. If your floss looks thin, add a strand; if it is bunching, take one away.

Turning it into an ornament

1. Block it. Dampen the finished piece, pin it flat and round on a board and let it dry overnight.

2. Trim. Cut around the circle leaving 1/2 in of bare canvas. Clip little notches into the margin every 1/2 in so it turns smoothly.

3. Back it. Cut a circle of stiff card or plastic canvas the size of the design and a circle of felt the same size for the back. Fold the canvas margin to the back over the card and glue or lace it in place.

4. Cord and hanger. Glue or whip-stitch cording around the edge, starting and ending at the top with a loop of ribbon for hanging. Glue the felt on the back to cover everything.

5. Make it a gift. Write the year and a name on the felt with a fabric pen. A stitched ornament lasts for years.

Rather not finish it yourself? Many needlepoint shops offer ornament finishing for a fee: take this page along.
